OncoSec CEO Punit Dhillon to Present at INTERFACE 2013 Digital Health Summit

SAN DIEGO--OncoSec is pleased to announce that CEO and co-founder, Punit Dhillon, will be speaking at this year's INTERFACE 2013 Digital Health Summit at the Vancouver Convention Centre located in Vancouver, B.C. The international, three-day conference is a gathering of the minds among some of North America's leading influencers in health IT, digital health, and the future of medicine.

"I'm delighted to be in the company of such an esteemed group of thinkers," said Dhillon. "I look forward to sharing my thoughts on the future of cancer treatment as well as hearing from the other speakers about their innovative digital health solutions."

Dhillon will deliver his talk on Thursday, October 10 at 10:45 AM PT entitled, "Inside the Battle of Making Chemo Obsolete" and will also be participating in a panel discussion on trade and investment in the healthcare industry. Other conference speakers include Terry McBride of YYoga, Geof Auchinleck of Claris Technologies, and Dr. Steven Steinhubl of Scripps Translational Science Institute. While in Vancouver, Dhillon will also be speaking at the launch event for TiE Young Entrepreneurs, a unique program that helps high school students learn about the challenges and rewards of becoming an entrepreneur. The program provides the students with an opportunity to be mentored by seasoned entrepreneurs, while creating a network of like-minded aspiring entrepreneurs. The TiE Young Entrepreneurs Launch Event is slated for October 12 at SFU Segal Graduate School of Business.

About INTERFACE 2013 Digital Health Summit
